

Boston Marathon Bombers Framed:
FBI, DHS Prime Suspects

An Investigation by Geoff Linsley

This investigation was published two weeks before the third anniversary of the Boston Marathon Bombings, which hopefully will be long enough for people to read this, examine the links and recognize it for what it is before Patriots' Day. My initial goal was to have it published before Dzhokhar was convicted. After immense trouble trying to find a publisher willing to get involved with it, I decided to publish it independently, despite the heightened difficulty of widely circulating it. Regardless, I probably should have released it months ago, and my apologies for waiting.

Please enjoy a free sample of the upcoming re-release of The Fall of America: The Rebellion Awakens, soon to be newly titled Reasons for the Rebellion, which will contain an overview of the events of the past three years and tie them in with the 2013 release.

© 2015, 2016 by Geoff Linsley

All rights reserved. Although this product was produced and copyrighted by the author, widespread fair use is encouraged and intended. Unaltered, full reproduction of this product is highly encouraged. An author credit must be provided if more than a sentence is reproduced for new productions.

Due to the dynamic nature of the Internet, any Web addresses or links contained in this work may have changed since its April 2016 publication and may no longer be valid. Some of the linked videos are presently unique but most have been reproduced on multiple accounts and can be rediscovered.

The Official Lie	- 4
There Was a Drill?	- 6
4Chan.org and Free Internet Showed What Really Happened First	- 6
Tamerlan Tsarnaev	- 7
Dzhokhar Tsarnaev	- 8
Sunil Tripathi	- 8
Ibragim Todashev	- 9
Citizen Journalism and More Propaganda	- 9
A Mass Casualty Drill?	- 13
The One Fund	- 15
Summary	- 16
The Trial of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev	- 17
Conclusions in Lieu of the Evidence	- 19

“You never want a serious crisis to go to waste. And what I mean by that is it’s an opportunity for you to do things you think you could not do before.” - President Obama’s first Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel in a 2008 Wall Street Journal interview

On April 14th, 2013, it wasn’t very hard to predict that an act of terror may soon be blamed on people who love freedom. What’s the best day of the year to frame patriots for a domestic terror attack? It is indisputably Patriots’ Day, April 15th.

Many in the liberty movement were warning of an imminent false flag attack against patriots. Any one of the glut of recent, open-sore scandals facing the Federal government, such as IRS-gate, Fast and Furious, Benghazi-gate, how we are all financial slaves to private families’ central banks as admitted in 2012 on CNBC, etc. are far more controversial than what the Nixon Administration did, which eventually culminated into a Presidential impeachment. On April 14th, the Federal government was on the hot seat more than ever, even occasionally on its own news outlets such as MSNBC, CNN and Fox News.

Historically, one of the leading ways a ruling, corrupt regime responds to intense public scrutiny and discontent is to distract its own people by covertly attacking them, blaming the attack on a patsy and then leading the public to the prefabricated conclusion that a change of policy that includes more government intervention is the only possible solution. While the majority of the public is blinded by fear, it’s much easier to jam even more corrupt motivations and deeds down their throats. For a while, the weak-minded forget their righteous anger at the government and instead become mentally paralyzed. Anyone who doesn’t believe the fabricated story deemed official by mainstream media is portrayed as a threat, a traitor and an enemy of society.

Propaganda channels from the White House, the CIA, the FBI, Homeland Security, etc. tell Reuters and the AP what to label news, which are primarily owned by the private families who own the Federal Reserve, among other central banks. Total control of mainstream media is, however, unattainable unless these families are writing all of their own stories. Sometimes their minions high on their corporate ladders don’t understand what all needs to be censored. Occasionally honest journalists report real news unhindered. The Boston Marathon bombings were different from previous acts of war and terror on American soil because many of the honest journalists who helped solve the case worked independently of the FBI and the DHS. Many weren’t reporters from mainstream media but rather citizen journalists who used the recording capabilities of their smart phones and uploaded their media to the Internet.

Most of the citations embedded in this investigation are from mainstream media and were published after the introduction of the FBI and DHS’s Joint Terrorism Task Force’s “official” story. To my knowledge, this is the most thorough overview of what really happened during and after the Boston Marathon bombings that’s currently available. It is not meant to include all of the enormous glut of articles written about the Boston Marathon bombings and the characters involved. Rather, it’s an attempt to create a skeleton of relevant and usually direct citations to either the core facts or the sources that chose to manufacture inaccurate or completely false propaganda - it’s a platform for further investigation. This composition contrasts what the FBI, Homeland Security and mainstream media want you to know vs. what was otherwise discovered and reported.

[If it’s not self-evident which information a link is referring to, push CTRL-F on your browser and input the word that’s hyperlinked to find the relevant text. For other items requiring citations, refer to the previously hyperlinked source.]

The Official Lie

On April 15th, 2013, Islamic extremists with “right-wing extremist” tendencies attacked innocents at the Boston Marathon with two pressure cooker bombs full of BBs and nails near the Boylston Street finish line, killing three and injuring 264.

Originally, it was reported that a third bomb or grouping of bombs exploded three miles away at the Kennedy Presidential Library. The story then changed and the explosions were said to have been products of an electrical fire.

Before finger pointing started, a thorough review of the potential suspects was called for by the FBI and surveillance footages of the neighboring businesses were requested. Within a day, President Obama added his two cents: “Any time bombs are used to target innocent civilians, it’s an act of terror.”

On April 17th, CNN, FOX News and the AP reported that a suspect was arrested. Reporters gathered around the Moakley Federal Courthouse because an arraignment was said to have been imminent. Spontaneously, a “code red” bomb threat was called in. Homeland Security and the Boston Police Dept. responded by sweeping the building and causing the postponement of the FBI’s press conference. The “code red” threat was the first in the library’s history.

On April 18th, the FBI scheduled a press conference at 5:00 PM to unveil the suspects. A press release was posted to FBI.gov, which accused who were soon known as the Tsarnaev brothers: “For clarity, these images should be the only ones—the only ones—that the public should view to assist us. Other photos should not be deemed credible and unnecessarily divert the public’s attention in the wrong direction and create undue work for vital law enforcement resources.”

That night, it is said the young men shot police officer Sean Collier multiple times on MIT’s campus. The FBI’s official criminal complaint against Dzhokhar, however, gives no details about the purported shooting and doesn’t discuss any possible motivation for the random killing. It instead whimsically jumps to a tale alleging the brothers carjacked a black Mercedes ML 350, kidnapped the driver and stole from him $800. After that, they purportedly robbed a 7-Eleven.

For the remainder of April 18th, Governor Deval Patrick authorized martial law for more than a million proximal residents. Twenty blocks of Watertown and Boston were shut down, including the public transportation system, public institutions, most businesses, Logan International Airport, streets and the airspace above. At first, it was reported that cell phone service was shut down for many in Boston. This was later refuted by cell phone companies but it is possible that “Emergency Wireless Protocols,” SOP 303, may have allowed the Federal government to have done it with the flick of a switch. Images of the illegal siege of Boston by the Federal government permeate the Internet. Boston Police Chief Linskey said “hundreds” of homes were searched.

Overnight, it is said the brothers fired at police officers on a Watertown street. Officials and some who claimed to have witnessed it described it as a “furious firefight.” The chase itself was corroborated by the Boston Police Dept. Its Police Chief said at least 200 rounds were shot. The brothers are said to have left officer Richard H. Donahue in critical condition during the purported exchange. Four improvised explosive devices allegedly were detonated by the suspects. One undetonated device reportedly was found inside the Mercedes, as well as two on Laurel St. All three were declared the suspects’ devices. On April 20th, NBC reported that not three but seven undetonated explosive devices were recovered.

The police told officials that, at the end of the chase, Tamerlan was run over and killed by Dzhokhar before he managed to escape. Only “six or seven” officers were involved in the chase, according to Watertown Police Captain Dupuis. The reason Dzhokhar was able to escape is because “they had another mission” that was more important.

After about 1,000 cops were dispatched to apprehend the 19-year-old but two hours after the martial law was lifted, the hunt ended. A boat owner on Franklin St. reportedly noticed his boat cover askew, walked to it and, after discovering an abundance of blood, informed authorities. After a dramatic, belabored wait, the assembled police randomly unloaded several dozen, perhaps a hundred rounds into the boat in a vulgar display of power. Afterward, officers called the spontaneous gratuitous violence a result of the “fog of war” and “contagious fire.”

After the unilateral gunfire and even the purported exchange during the chase, Dzhokhar was found unarmed. It is said he shot himself in the throat during an unsuccessful suicide attempt. This contrasts with the widely-circulated picture of him walking out of the boat on his own seemingly blood-free. An FBI hostage rescue team seized and imprisoned him when he exited the boat at 8:45 PM.

Boston Police Commissioner Edward F. Davis then prematurely presumed that citizens could “be confident that the threat has been removed.” “We are eternally grateful for the outcome here tonight. We have a suspect in custody,” said Colonel Timothy Alben, Commander of the State Police, followed by the haughty, tyrannical statement “We’re so grateful to bring justice and closure to this case,” setting the precedent that it’s normal and acceptable for police to play judge, jury and executioner simultaneously.

On April 22, Dzhokhar was formally charged with “using a weapon of mass destruction.” “After placing the IEDs among the crowd,” the indictment alleges, “Tsarnaev and his brother detonated the bombs seconds apart, killing three people, maiming and injuring many more, and forcing a premature end to the marathon.”

On May 1, three were charged with concealing evidence, purportedly for removing some of Dzhokhar’s possessions: a laptop and some fireworks. In the end, the charges stuck to two of them and the other man was charged with “making false statements.”

A final charge, for obstruction of justice, was handed out on May 30, 2014 to Khairullozhon Matanov for clearing his Internet browsing history.

There Was a Drill?

After the explosions, the stretch near the finish line was enveloped in confusion. Boston PD immediately began responding to the scene but a few minutes later, the policemen were ordered [0:31] to stay off their radios, making what runners reported during the Marathon even more mysterious. Unbeknown to most, speakers at the event boomed that a “training exercise” was taking place and asked runners to not be alarmed. Before and during the race, rooftop snipers and bomb sniffing dogs were rife, even around the finish line, which is unusual for any marathon. One of the observers, Alastair Stevenson gave a full-length interview about the scene. Corroborating his claims, the words “This is a drill, this is a drill” seem to have been recorded [0:44] by a citizen journalist just before the blasts.

Before the explosions, the Boston Globe tweeted: “There will be a controlled explosion opposite the library within one minute as part of bomb squad activities.” There is thus no room for arguing against the fact that the blast was anticipated by the Boston Globe, which lets readers read five articles per month before demanding money. How did the Boston Globe know beforehand what was going to happen if it was an act of terror committed by the Tsarnaev brothers?

The day of the bombings, the FBI held its first press conference. It ended abruptly after reporter Dan Bidondi inquired about the drill that witnesses described but was never reported by mainstream media. Why would a terrorist, whose goal is by definition to inflict terror, choose to bomb, of all places, a bomb squad drill? How probable is it that a drill run on Patriot’s Day featuring “right-wing” terrorists with backpack bombs would happen at the same time and place as an authentic Muslim extremist attack featuring backpack bombs?

4Chan.org and Free Internet Showed What Really Happened First

The Boston Marathon bombings happened in areas heavily surveilled by local businesses. Much of the footage taken was uploaded to file sharing website 4chan.org. From there, images and videos of what really happened went viral. Two suspects seen possibly planting backpacks were soon written about by the New York Post, which established that the men were already being investigated by Boston PD.

Radio host Alex Jones was the first to spot what he initially thought was Navy SEAL Team 5 in civilian clothing operating as private military contractors (mercenaries.) To help create a fog of war, they were all holding backpacks identical to the one that's said to have contained the first explosive. The second bomb was first said to have been in a garbage can a block west but this report was replaced by another claiming it was in a backpack just behind the divider next to the road. Seven more military contractors were later spotted. News of their presence spread fast, as evidenced days afterward by several informed CSPAN callers calling in on the same show. They were later identified as the 24th National Guard Weapons of Mass Destruction-Civil Support Team (CST.) which is intended to support first responders during emergencies, i.e biological, chemical, nuclear or radiological threats. Interestingly, the Pentagon had recently tried to dismantle the unit involved twice.

No images have surfaced of the Tsarnaev brothers holding backpacks identical to the black backpack that's said to have contained a pressure cooker bomb. For instance, Dzhokhar's backpack in the media provided by the FBI is grey.

Among a few suspects, the 4chan.org photos suggest that the first backpack that's said to have housed a pressure cooker bomb was actually placed by a disheveled, thin, heavily-bearded white man in a baggy blue coat and a stretched out red shirt, who looked like he hadn't showered in a while. He clearly isn't but resembles the "Unabomber." These photos went viral on April 17th. That same day, many reporters gathered around the courthouse because the FBI announced it was going to hold a press conference to reveal a suspect. It suddenly cancelled it because of "conflicting reports," which may have been a stumbling response to the widespread circulation of the photos of the other suspects and the backpacked CST team.

Tamerlan Tsarnaev

It's easy to hypothesize that the reason the FBI was adamant on April 18th that the Tsarnaev brothers were the only suspects worth investigating is because it knew them much better than it knows most citizens. Russia Today (RT) was the first to spill the beans. The brothers' mom Zubeidat explained that the FBI had been surveilling them for years: "They used to come [to our] home, they used to talk to me... they were telling me that [Tamerlan] was really an extremist leader and they were afraid of him. They told me whatever information he is getting, he gets from these extremist sites... they were controlling him, they were controlling his every step... and now they say that this is a terrorist act!"

In 2011, Russia's government requested that the FBI review Tamerlan's potential connections to Chechen terrorists. The FBI concluded that there wasn't enough evidence to continue their investigation. CBS Boston followed RT's investigation with one of its own, in which it disclosed how the FBI had been wiretapping Tamerlan since 2011. The Wall Street Journal also explained how Russia had reached out. Six months before the bombings, the Russian government spotted him with Dagestani "militant" Gadzhimurad Dolgatov six times at a mosque, which caused it to request another investigation of Tamerlan. This time, the FBI never bothered to respond. It later blamed Russia for not sharing information about Tamerlan when it was already crystal clear that Russia had sounded the alarm and the FBI had exercised premeditated negligence.

Although unsubstantiated, their aunt Maret insists she saw Tamerlan on CNN footage of the shootout being ushered into a police cruiser, not lying on the pavement because he was run over by his brother. As reported by the ER doctor at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Brookline, Tamerlan truly died from several gunshots and didn't appear to have been run over. The death certificate, however, aligned perfectly with the information provided by the FBI.

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev

Nothing has surfaced to indicate the brothers had any clue what was about to happen to them and their good names. It is known that both brothers were affiliated in some way with the FBI for several years prior to the 2013 Boston Marathon. The FBI was much more interested in Tamerlan than Dzhokhar but their mom Zubeidat made it clear that her entire family was under tight surveillance.

Despite the fact that he was here legally and, if convicted, would typically be classified as a deranged premeditated murderer, several terror-industry “rino” Republicans wanted to declare Dzhokhar an unlawful “enemy combatant,” as if the bombings were associated with Russia.

The grey backpack he was wearing doesn’t match the backpack that’s said to have once housed a pressure cooker bomb.

Interviews with those close to him all suggest he was an upstanding young man. In high school, he was a wrestling captain and a scholarship-winning top student. He appears to have been universally beloved by his community, which still doesn’t buy the FBI’s tale and vouches for his character. Before apprehended, he left this on Facebook: “This will be the last message before the police get me. I never done it. They set me up. Father please forgive me. I am sorry it has come to this.”

For over a year, there existed little propaganda to suggest that the brothers’ roles in orchestrating the bombings and the aftermath were anywhere close to equivalent. To help patch this up before the trial, it was claimed that the gun purportedly used by them was his because it purportedly came from Stephen Silva, who’s said to have been closer to him than to Tamerlan.

Dzhokhar was also taken to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center because he had multiple gunshot wounds to the head, neck, leg and hand. This contradicts the official lie, which mentions only one gunshot to the throat from a purportedly botched suicide attempt.

Sunil Tripathi

Before the Tsarnaev brothers were the only suspects that citizens were told to pay any attention to, it was widely reported that missing Brown University student Sunil Tripathi and Mike Mulugeta were suspects. It was also reported that police had only arrested Tripathi; and that they had shot and killed him.

He went missing at 11:00 AM March 16, 2013. A post on the “Help Us Find Sunil Tripathi” Facebook page set up by his family and friends explains that he’d recently written something that expressed suicidal intent. After about a month, the FBI volunteered itself to help with the search.

Tripathi was misidentified on Reddit.com by a former classmate who was checking out the FBI’s photos of suspect #2. Boston police then called him a suspect over their police scanner, which was heard worldwide over the Internet. The story went viral. The International Business Times and CBS said he was the primary suspect. CBS later blamed Reddit for its own sloppy journalism and the Boston PD’s doings. The FBI responded by denying that there had been any arrests and, a couple weeks later, tried to smooth over the lack of cooperation between it and Boston PD with an unnecessary Joint Statement about how well they cooperate.

In a May 15th, 2015 interview, one of the neighbors near the boat in Watertown claimed to have witnessed Sunil in custody behind his house. He also reportedly received a call from someone claiming to have been from the Boston Globe who was looking for “hostages or people withholding the terrorists” before authorities randomly stormed through his house. In addition, he reportedly received an Internet notification the previous night stating that the explosions heard throughout the neighborhood during the alleged shootout, purportedly from the detonation of the Tsarnaevs' improvised explosive devices, were "controlled explosions" being conducted by police.

On April 23rd, Sunil Tripathi was found dead floating in the Providence River behind the Wyndham Garden Providence hotel, yet the Rhode Island medical examiner said there was no foul play suspected in his death.

Ibragim Todashev

On May 22nd, 2013, the FBI visited a Chechen-American friend of Tamerlan Tsarnaev named Ibragim Todashev at his apartment. Four agents gave him a confession to sign that pinned Tamerlan and himself to the September 11, 2011 Waltham, MA triple homicide. The FBI says he was signing it when he spontaneously grew violent and attacked one of the agents with "some kind of stick."

That's the reason the FBI cites for murdering him. Afterwards, he was left with six bulletholes, including one point blank to the head, which is often called a "control shot" because it's done to ensure that an already wounded man dies.

Todashev's athleticism and assaultive history have been used to demonize him and build the illusion that the agents' doings were necessary. It was soon revealed that one of his killers, agent Aaron McFarlane, had an even worse assaultive history while on the clock for the FBI. Todashev's father Abdulkaki is in the process of suing the FBI for the blatantly wrongful execution. It has thus far been allowed to keep details about the murder secret and, to date, has never admitted to wrongfully shooting anyone. During Dzhokhar's trial, the US District court established that there existed "no evidence" to connect Tamerlan to the conveniently-dated triple homicide.

Citizen Journalism and More Propaganda

Fear generated from incidents like the Boston Marathon bombings leads citizens to accept forms of government intervention that normally wouldn't be permitted, so it is of great interest to the owners of mainstream media, certain corrupt politicians, the banks that finance them and, most importantly, the private families that own the major banks and corporations, which ultimately are the head propagandists. They can contrive narratives to direct popular opinion in directions that would otherwise set off alarms in citizens' minds. President Obama, for example, is still invoking the fear generated by the bombings to further the fable that more government intrusions are the only ways to save us from terrorism. Wielding the power to control such things via financial might, these parties can freely manufacture completely false news and afterwards make sure it all solidifies into the official narrative.

Fake Motives

Fraudulent news reports have patched and expanded the JTTF's official lie. On April 23rd, Boston Police and CBS attempted to improve the broken narrative regarding MIT officer Sean Collier by reporting that the brothers' mysterious motive for killing him was to get his gun. It, however, was admitted that the only evidence used to draw that conclusion was that there was "an attempt to yank it" from its holster. That he may have tugged on it himself if aware of imminent danger wasn't considered.

About three weeks later, Dzhokhar's purported motive for orchestrating the Boston Marathon bombings reportedly was finally discovered written in pen on the boat wherein he was hiding. Obviously such evidence would have been nearly immediately discovered and would have been viral news if it existed when he was kidnapped. Many likely noticed that it would have been quite difficult, if not impossible to write on the boat's finished, vertically-oriented panel with a pen. Thus, the propaganda changed from a pen to a pencil; and the spin on the sudden change was that he'd "used a pencil to pen" the message. The reporter who broke the initial story was CBS's Senior Correspondent John Miller, who, during his recent hiatus from journalism, helped Chief William Bratton establish counterterrorism bureaus for the LAPD, served as the top spokesman for the FBI and worked for the Director of the Office of National Intelligence, which oversees the CIA and FBI.

The Saudi

Before Sunil Tripathi, Saudi student Abdul Rahman Alharbi, a regular at the White House, was declared a "person of interest." No reason to affiliate him with what happened has surfaced but some peculiar, notable events happened immediately after the declaration.

Why did a Saudi Arabian newspaper report that Michelle Obama met with Alharbi in the hospital where he was being held for purported injuries related to one of the blasts? Why did Secretary of State John Kerry and the Saudi foreign minister meet behind closed doors the next day when their meeting was first scheduled to be open to the press? Why did President Obama also have an unscheduled meeting with the Saudi foreign minister?

Alharbi was swiftly deported home, despite having several known ties to al Qaeda terrorists. The other two Saudis who accompanied him somehow avoided the limelight. Was he just a distraction?

Citizen Journalism and Conflicting Reports

Several eyewitness accounts and media contradicted the details provided by mainstream media. More than ever, technology hindered and damaged the grand political fable while it was still surfacing. The poorly-judged hindrance was lazily addressed when the DHS and FBI warned of terrorists using "cameras or video recorders" and "sketching, or note taking consistent with ... surveillance." It was noted that suspicious activity reports needed to be "forwarded to the appropriate fusion center and FBI Joint Terrorism Task Force for further action." After stating this, the FBI felt the need to confiscate the locale's surveillance footages, as reported by local businesses. Across the country, there are more than 600 Joint Terrorism Task Force offices spying primarily on "right-wing" political advocacy organizations.

7-Eleven's Director of Corporate Communication Margaret Chabris made it clear that not only was the accusation that the brothers robbed the 7-Eleven false, "The suspect in the photos for that particular 7-Eleven robbery looks nothing like the suspects."

The shooting of officer Sean Collier was first reported to have happened while he was responding to a disturbance on MIT's campus. According to the university, he was shot during "an altercation at the corner of Vassar Street and Main Street on the MIT campus." It was later reported that he was slain "execution-style" while in his patrol car on campus. News of the event then seemingly magically changed to him having encountered the Tsarnaev brothers, who are now said to have approached him to steal his gun at a gas station/convenience store off-campus in Cambridge, despite the fact that he admittedly never lost his gun. A security video was later said to have caught the brothers shooting him but, as reported four days prior, the faces of the men weren't discernible.

When the chase with the black Mercedes SUV halted and police were shooting it, a citizen video recorded what reportedly was the standoff and the suspects yelling "We didn't do it!" in response to unilateral gunfire. It is alleged that the brothers nearly killed officer Richard H. Donahue during the shootout but eyewitness accounts damaged that fiction by explaining that he was shot by the belligerent, shamefully reckless gunfire of the police, themselves. Interestingly, Donahue was one of the first to report at MIT's campus at the true scene of the "execution-style" murder of Collier.

Despite the aforesaid evidence, the fiction continued over a year later when Fox News reported that the gun Tamerlan is said to have used was traced back to a Maine drug gang and was identified as the same gun that was used to kill Collier and critically wound Donahue. It is also alleged that Tamerlan was only able to afford trips home and to Dagestan because of his affiliations with Maine's drug trade. Two others connected to the reported gun were later arrested: Danny Sun Jr. and Biniam Tsegai. Danny was arrested on May 1, 2013 for failing to appear at a traffic court hearing. He then reportedly explained he'd passed the gun to Tsegai, who was arrested three weeks later, eventually convicted of a slew of charges and exiled to prison.

A reported friend of the bombers Stephen Silva was charged, quickly run through court and sent to prison a month before Dzhokhar's trial for selling heroin. The official narrative now holds that somewhere down the line, Silva received the gun - which had "removed, obliterated and altered" manufacturer and serial numbers - and gave it to Dzhokhar. Silva was also charged with possessing the unidentifiable gun but not with anything involving the bombings. Despite being reportedly unidentifiable, it is said the ATF managed to perfectly reconstruct the original number. Considering he was otherwise going to be railroaded for distributing heroin, it was beneficial for him to also plead guilty to the relatively inconsequential gun charge.

Let's quickly recap what's said to have happened to the gun. The story starts with the legitimate, traceable purchase of a gun in Maine. While it moved from Sun Jr. to an unlawful, now imprisoned owner in Portland, to an unlawful, now imprisoned owner in Boston and possibly to others before Silva, it lost its traceability. Nevertheless, the ATF reportedly was able to directly trace it to a Cabela's in Maine. All of that added narrative, which is merely hearsay crafted to make the trial of Dzhokhar seem more legitimate, appeared without the assignment of any new charges related to the Boston Marathon bombings. It is being labeled as strong evidence that the brothers' purported gun was used to shoot both officers. As of yet, no reasonable evidence exists to suggest the brothers as much as touched a gun on Patriot's Day, nor afterward.

Connections to "Right-wing Extremism"

Within two hours of the bombings, CNN started to cling to the twist that "right-wing extremists" were behind them. No evidence was gathered for such a conclusion to be drawn but this blind guess began to reappear elsewhere. On April 16th, Chris Matthews of MSNBC started to firmly point at "far right... extremists." Later that day, Salon did a hit piece entitled "Let's hope the Boston Marathon bomber is a white American," which basically called for everyone to begin profiling all white people as terrorists. On the 17th, Lawrence O'Donnell of MSNBC blamed the incident on citizen's access to gunpowder in ammunition and alleged that the NRA is "in the business of helping bombers get away with their crimes." The next day, NPR Counterterrorism Correspondent Dina Temple Ratson also jumped on the blame the "right-wing individuals" bandwagon.

The criticisms of those who attempted to expose what really happened immediately after the bombings were peculiar. The LA Times authorized the release of some particularly slanderous slams of Alex Jones for pointing out that a CST team stationed next to the site of the bombing wore backpacks identical to the one the FBI said exploded: author David Horsey called those who listen to Jones an "angry gaggle of paranoiac followers" and adds "it is worth pointing out what a worthless waste of skin and bones Jones and his minions happen to be." As usual, White House front group the Southern Poverty Law Center belittled everyone who's smart enough to not buy the official story, including Alex Jones. Bloomberg also did a piece demonizing Jones for discussing evidence that mainstream media avoided.

About four months after the bombings, the BBC reported that Tamerlan possessed "right-wing extremist" and "white supremacist literature." The "right-wing" documents were labeled thusly simply because they suggested that criminal elements of the government are known to have conspired against the American people and the world. 9/11 Truthers, people who don't believe the official story regarding the 1995 Oklahoma

City bombings and gun rights advocates were also grouped with Tamerlan's purportedly evidenced political leanings. The reported "white supremacist literature" was popular anti-Semitic book The Protocols of Zion, which has international, interracial historical significance. When others are accused of reading or owning it, they are accused of being readers or book collectors, not terrorists or white supremacists. No explanation was given regarding why these findings were reported in August instead of shortly after they were purportedly confiscated by investigators.

Two weeks later, The Blaze reported that the brothers were influenced by a "radical libertarian agenda" and "conspiracy theories."

One year after the bombings, Alex Wagner and MSNBC tried to embolden the brothers' fictitious connections with patriot groups [0:48], radio host Alex Jones and racist whites. With Mark Potok from the Southern Poverty Law Center, Wagner also tried to conflate the bombings with libertarianism and people who don't like Obamacare. Mainstream media has not yet corrected any of these ridiculous additions to the narrative.

Danny Meng

What ever happened to the man the brothers purportedly robbed and kidnapped? The "Chinese Internet entrepreneur student" is said to have initially asked to remain anonymous, despite the fact that Tamerlan was dead and Dzhokhar was in custody. The publicity the incident would have given his reported entrepreneurship would have been tremendous but, instead, he said "I don't want to be a famous person talking on the TV" and "I don't feel like a hero." Media began referring to him as "Danny."

Tamerlan allegedly bragged about bombing the Boston Marathon to him. The brothers purportedly put "ammunition and explosives" in the trunk of his Mercedes, although it was just assumed that those were the items after "Danny" reportedly heard the trunk open and close. He's said to have been present when the brothers stopped at the Shell station on Memorial Dr. for gas but, for some unknown reason, was allowed to run away.

A few days later, more updates surfaced. To try to substantiate the deliberately false narrative, it was reported that Tamerlan made a racist comment to him about entire races looking the same. His only interview soon after the incident is said to have been behind closed doors with reporter Eric Moskowitz from the Boston Globe. Beyond what Moskowitz may believe, there has been no meaningful confirmation that the man he interviewed was actually "Danny," the man allegedly kidnapped by the brothers.

About a week later, CBS claimed to have done a new interview with "Danny" and tried to craft the illusion that he was in the same room as the interviewer. It, however, was a blacked-out video on one side and, at best, an interviewer conversing with a screen on the other. The interviewer was once again Senior Correspondent John Miller, who recently served as the top spokesman for the FBI and worked for the Director of the Office of National Intelligence. An interview with another man who barely speaks English and claims to have seen Danny after the incident was put out by Piers Morgan on CNN but it contributed virtually no substance except for the claim that he was hysterical even after reportedly having been brave enough to have escaped.

One year after the incident, the so-called great unveiling of "Danny" happened on CBS with a short video interview of "Daniel Meng," wherein he only recapped the official narrative and managed to add no new details. This interview is commonly deemed the strongest "evidence" that any of the events beginning with the Boston Marathon bombings were the faults of the Tsarnaev brothers.

There is, however, only one Bostonian Internet entrepreneur named Daniel Meng and he isn't the same man. A co-founder of Venvy, Inc. looks somewhat similar, wears glasses and has a similar haircut but, upon closer inspection, has a much thinner likeness, a much smaller nose and less pronounced cheek bones. He studied Economics and Strategy at Western and LSE respectively, not Engineering from Northeastern. Internet profiles say he went to Western University in Canada, not Boston. It is unclear how "Danny" was able to obtain a Master's degree in Engineering from an American school if he's still barely able to talk during such an important interview.

Although there is presently no apparent direct connection between Venvy - a “fun mix of Pinterest and Twitter for video” - its Daniel Meng and what transpired, it is noteworthy that investors publicly gave Venvy \$565,000 - $35,000 in October 2013, $80,000 in December and $450,000 in June 2015 (when Dzhokhar was sentenced) - to help with its “day-to-day” operations. Daniel Meng publically became a co-founder of the pre-existent Venvy, Inc. in May, about two weeks after the Boston Marathon bombings. His history with Venvy was recently deleted from his LinkedIn page. Meng recently split ties with Venvy and formed his own entrepreneurship. Only traces of his prior association with Venvy can be found on the Internet. New Chinese media darling, primary founder of Venvy William Joy was recently named one of China’s top 30 entrepreneurs under the age of 30 by Forbes China.

A Mass Casualty Drill?

Film and TV director Nathan Folks claims the Boston Marathon bombings and the aftermath was a “false flag attack,” using crisis actors, fake blood, smoke bombs and smiling “victims.” The evidence only reinforces this claim.

There are some notable things in mainstream media’s video from the finish line of the first bombing. A cued, dramatic camera zoom occurred one second before the explosion. Only one person appeared physically affected by the blast and that was a tired-legged, startled, uninjured man who momentarily fell before crossing the finish line. Even the people lining the area near the blast appeared unaffected, as if the explosion came from upward-oriented pyrotechnics.

This description isn’t merely an analogy. From the evidence provided by citizen journalists and investigators, it appears the reported pressure cooker bomb was the scheduled firing of a mortar [0:21] positioned behind the advertisement-laden divider. One of the bombs was first reported by an eyewitness as having blown up in a garbage can but this was replaced by new reports of a second backpack in a gathering behind the divider down the street. It appears the first “bomb” was fired by a mortar [4:54] that looked like a garbage can. It may have been ignited by a proximal car battery [8:57]. What appears to have been a remnant from the detonated flash bomb was picked up by an older gentleman with a black jacket and the same black sunglasses seen on those in the inner circle of the drill. He then walked away and tucked [1:35] the remnant under his jacket.

Many images and some footage of what actually happened behind the divider are available. Where are the three dead? Where are the reported two hundred and sixty-four injured? Why are most of the bystanders paying little attention to what’s happening when purported victims reportedly were in agony and desperately in need of immediate help?

The gore after the pyrotechnics was part of a mass casualty drill. None of it was real. All of the injuries were fake. Some kind of dust was dumped [1:38] from a bucket onto purported victims. A woman let an unnatural-looking trail of blood fall from her handbag [1:21] around the scene. The most publicized injury, Jeff Bauman’s severed and exposed tibia, mysteriously frayed after the first photos from Boylston Street. High-quality videos [2:20] were later released documenting the making of the gore and the faking of the aftermath of the bombings to erase any doubts that the many bits of evidence previously revealed by citizen investigators weren’t being incorrectly interpreted.

Any terrified bystander who didn’t immediately flee saw the assemblage of a peculiar scene. Media attempting to bravely report on what happened were blocked by Boston police and a busy blockade of DHS workers [9:30] with yellow jackets and red badges hanging around their necks. Immediately after the explosions, priests from three nearby churches on Boylston St. gathered sacramental oils to anoint the injured and deliver customary last rites but were prohibited. St. Clements Reverend John Wykes, who just a decade before was a hospital chaplain in Illinois with over half a century of experience, said this was the first time he’d ever been denied access to an accident or crime scene. If there was ever a change in policy regarding clergymen, it must have happened very recently and unbeknownst to the mainstay of the clergy, who were permitted to help and jeopardize their lives during 9/11. Boston police and the DHS have yet to offer explanations for their decisions to keep them behind a barrier of police tape. Aware Catholics nationwide don't understand why the actions of terrorists are justifications for the denials of victims' spiritual lives. Many believe the "ad hoc" decision was made in error.

Footage of another very curious component of Tamerlan's involvement with the JTTF's drill has emerged. Purported victim and amputee Mery Daniel is seen very clearly next to and walking in stride with Tamerlan, wearing the same black sunglasses seen before, in front of the Forum restaurant on Boylston St. This provides very strong evidence of what was already surmised by many: that known FBI affiliate Tamerlan was somehow involved with the inner circle of the JTTF's drill beyond becoming the primary patsy. Mery, who may have been of assistance in helping Jeff Bauman get into costume, can be seen seemingly painless on the ground next to him lying in, not pieces of the wooden divider, but scattered papers and random trash.

CNN in particular was caught faking live reports on the bombings and the aftermath. Nancy Grace was caught talking to a reporter stationed in a different part of the same parking lot. CNN was also unbelievably lazy with one of its crisis actors after she was interviewed [0:33] at the Boston Marathon because she reappeared in a separate interview in Watertown, and then again in Sandy Hook! Such funny business throughout mainstream media may have helped Boston Police Commissioner Edward F. Davis slip up on Fox News and call the Tsarnaevs "actors [1:28]... carrying out suspicion."

Crisis actor Liz Norden's two sons are said to have both lost legs. The hair she let rest over her eyes during her interview disguised that she wasn't actually crying and merely sounds near tears on occasion. She initiates and adjusts her dramatics frequently - sometimes she pretends to be nearly inconsolable but her timing is cued, forced and unnatural. Despite some alleged victims reportedly having received over a dozen surgeries, all ten who purportedly had shrapnel embedded in their limbs reportedly received amputations. Norden and her sons were reused to pull emotional strings during the sentencing of Dzhokhar.

Some of the many crisis actors were given honorary degrees and have continued as actors: the stars of the Boston Marathon bombings. What kind of Americans would agree to being actors in the staging of an act of terror on American soil? Some may be very dishonest people desperately seeking fame. Some may have been naive enough to have been brainwashed into thinking their acting was going to improve public safety response and didn't understand what all was going to transpire. Companies like Strategic Operations specialize in crisis acting [6:39] to, for example, help prepare the military for critical situations on the battlefield. Strategic Operations is known to help Boston disaster preparedness.

Some of the characters' motives are more complicated, such as the most publicized "hero," Carlos Arredondo, who "saved" Jeff, the amputee actor, although the available footage [2:24] shows him mostly goofing off while others did most of the "work." It turns out that, long ago, Carlos admitted to accidentally blowing up [17:07] a US military vehicle. For this incident alone, agencies of the Federal government can now blackmail him and force him to either be a crisis actor or visit a Federal prison for an undetermined stretch. So, he chooses to pretend he was a hero during the aftermath of the fictitious Boston Marathon bombings, among prior and later events when he was put out [36:09] on display. Our beloved US Justice Dept. issued an \$8.4 million grant for "victims, witnesses and first responders" to "help" them, which was spent parading [38:16] the characters of the Boston Marathon bombings around the country.

Three Dead: Krystle Campbell, Martin Richard and Lu Lingzi

Who was Krystle Campbell? She is the crisis actor seen in this video with no visible injuries pulling on the barrier and yelling. Known paraplegic crisis actor Jeff Bauman is feet away appearing to have been receiving attention while no one paid attention to Krystle's purportedly life-threatening injury: a critically damaged limb. Several images reveal the same fake blood, gore and physical impossibilities that have been revealed in Jeff's case. While moving her onto the gurney, the prosthetic piece she was wearing shifted [1:38] out of position and high quality images [4:45] of the mishap were captured. It and what remains of her healed missing leg are clearly visible. Notice the Department of Homeland Security workers with red badges hovering around her otherwise perfectly healthy body.

ABC disclosed that it was initially reported that Krystle had survived [0:30] and was being treated in the hospital. A follow-up report from the chief of staff of the Mayor of Medford, however, claimed she'd died instantly.

8-year-old Martin Richard is said to have been burned and later perished from a virtually severed arm and massive abdominal wounds from nails, BB pellets and wood fragments. Early reports established that he was killed by the first explosion near the finish line, where he reportedly gave his father Bill Richard a hug. This seemed peculiar to many because no spectators were permitted to greet runners directly at the finish line. MSNBC released a contradictory report stating that his father is a runner but had not run in the Marathon. The next day, the Huffington Post reported that the family suffered injuries from the second blast while running in terror from the first.

An overhead image from a couple seconds after the second explosion exists. Martin and his sister Jane - who purportedly lost a leg - aren't in sight. Elsewhere, Martin and his father Bill were photographed defying medical protocol by hurrying somewhere with two other men. Martin's purported massive abdominal wounds were shielded from the limelight under a white sheet. One of the men carrying Martin had a tight, hugging grip around his purportedly fatal abdominal wounds and nearly severed arm. Another photograph shows Bill carrying Martin around his abdomen with one arm after the blast.

The official narrative fables that all of the Richards suffered injuries. Mother Denise reportedly had same-day surgery for a brain injury. Conflicting reports stated it was merely an eye injury. Ball bearings reportedly were lodged in Bill's leg. Brother Henry is said to have been a victim of unspecified minor injuries. No evidence has emerged to verify that the Richards were hurt but the existing evidence does suggest that they are a family of crisis actors.

23-year old Chinese Boston University graduate student Lu Lingzi purportedly bled to death from a baseball-sized shrapnel wound from the second blast. Officer Lauren Woods is credited for having identified the injured and dying Lu on the concrete but the available images reveal that the purportedly injured young woman looks more like her reported friend Zhou Danling. Zhou later said in court that it wasn't until much later, in the hospital, when she'd been informed that Lu's condition had grown fatal. This contradicts the testimony of medical examiner Dr. Katherine Lindstrom, who explained that Lu would have died "within seconds to minutes" of the blast from massive blood loss.

The primary image used during the trial to tie Dzhokhar to the placement of the second bomb appears to have instead documented Lu's camera bag. The available overhead photos reveal that the second detonation happened visibly and undeniably in front of the fence but we've been told that it happened closer to the tree several feet behind, near where he happened to walk by. The tree, which was the best frame of reference in that particular photo for analyzing where he was relative to the true locations of both the detonation and Lu's bag, was conveniently chopped down [see photo items 8 and 11] no longer than a day later, before the area was even cleaned. Police said they removed the tree because it was "evidence."

Lu Lingzi's identity miraculously was kept secret for two days reportedly [2:27] because her family was worried about how her grandparents would react to the news. China's Shenyang Evening News revealed her identity and, like most publications, acknowledged that she was once a student of the Beijing Institute of Technology but skipped that she was also a student of the University of California Riverside Extension in 2010.

The overhead image that revealed Martin and family weren't near the second explosion seconds afterward also revealed that Lu was nowhere to be seen. Details about her purported burial and gravesite are unknown and are being kept secret.

Fake obituaries were made for Lu, Martin and Krystle but the available evidence reveals they never died and weren't even injured. The Social Security Master Death File - the legitimate record, not mailed in by contributors or fabricated on webpages - failed to list [0:30] even one of them.

The One Fund

As mentioned earlier, the US Justice Dept. issued an \$8.4 million grant for “victims, witnesses and first responders” to “help” them, which funded the first national tours of the characters of the Boston Marathon bombings. That wasn’t enough to pay off all of the criminal overseers, crisis actors and other pawns who dirtied their hands throughout the drill. Spearheaded by Governor Deval Patrick and Mayor Thomas Menino one day after the massively publicized chaos on Boylston St., the One Fund was placed into the hands of Bank of America Merrill Lynch.

Bank of America was a primary financier of the 2012 Obama Administration, which, in a mammoth 2014 lawsuit, negotiated and settled a relatively meager penalty of [\$16.65 billion with the bank through its Dept. of Justice for fraud leading up to and during the 2008 financial crisis. \$7 billion of that was publicly forwarded from the Dept. of Justice to radical liberal activist groups. This was greatly convenient for Bank of America, which has an established tradition of publicly funding radical left-wing organizations to aid its “solid corporate governance practices.”]

By Dec. 2014, the Fund collected over \$80 million purportedly to help victims. \$1.5 million of that reportedly established The One Fund Center for two years for purported victims, \$1 million was given to Massachusetts General Hospital and $500,000 was given to Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary. Beyond the purported amputees, the vast majority of the reported injuries were from noise or emotional trauma.

Some have tried to collect from the One Fund but instead received serious penalties, even prison time. Two boys who tried to scam \$2.195 million via identity theft were presented with a fake check from an undercover State trooper and arrested after it exchanged hands.

Amy Molloy of Maine was charged with larceny for providing fraudulent medical records after reportedly having received \$8,000 for a foot injury. It reportedly wasn’t until she sent in more fraudulent medical records seeking $12,500 for a hip injury that an investigation concluded she wasn’t legitimately injured by the blasts.

After collecting $40,000 but later having overstretched by requesting an additional \$2 million, Joanna Leigh was prosecuted for having insufficient medical records. Her case is particularly interesting because she was one of the crisis actresses who claimed [2:08] to have been ten feet from a blast. Her additional claim was submitted after she publicly criticized her allotted share of the One Fund. No one has explained why she was given $40,000 if adequate medical records weren’t already gathered and filed.

Of course, it’s easy for the Attorney General to prosecute someone for scamming the charity because its true recipients definitively know that 264 weren’t legitimately injured. Some quick math: $8.6 million + $78 million = $86.6 million, which would on average give each victim $328,030. Additionally, purported victims independently raised donations from personal websites. Many of the shinier stars of the Boston Marathon bombings generated around $1 million each. Where are all of the feel-good articles about the newly much wealthier Boston Marathon bombings victims? When the One Fund closed its last accounts, its President James Gallagher concluded: “this fund forever changed the model for how to efficiently collect and quickly redistribute resources....”

In addition to the tens of millions of missing One Fund dollars, a Hollywood movie about the bombings written by Matt Charman is on its way. Mark Wahlberg has begun co-producing “Patriot’s Day,” the fiction based on the fiction. It is being fast-tracked by CBS Films because Fox’s “Boston Strong” is competing to be released first, while people’s fake emotional wounds are as fresh as possible. Lionsgate is also making a movie called “Stronger” centered on known crisis actor Jeff Bauman, despite the availability of footage of one of his prosthetic stage props having fallen off before having been quickly reattached by one of his handlers while they wheeled him away.

Summary

A December 2014 summary of the JTTF's drill called "After Action Report for the Response to the 2013 Boston Marathon Bombings" discussed its effectiveness and recommended areas for future improvement. It apologized for the undeniably barbaric, unwarranted gunfire of the police but otherwise lauded the martial law that ensued as a "great success."

In an ABC News interview days after the bombings, former President George W. Bush slipped and basically admitted that the Boston Marathon bombings appeared to have been part of "another conspiracy," which earned him a quick, you-blew-it look from wife Laura. It in itself means little to nothing but it does speak to the nearly comical obviousness of it all.

Media and the FBI's conviction that the Tsarnaev brothers are the only possible suspects has always been entirely rooted in speculation and in no way resembled the due process that US law once maintained. All of the purported evidences introduced since then have been ridiculous contrivances.

It is alleged that they shot police officer Sean Collier multiple times in Cambridge. The FBI's official criminal complaint against Dzhokhar, however, gives no details about the incident. This is because it was a poorly-scripted contrivance. The details of the shooting - on MIT's campus - never even meshed with the official narrative.

It was proven that neither of them robbed the 7-Eleven. Critical details of the purported exchange between the brothers and the trigger-happy mob of officials who reportedly chased them appear to have been lies. It was admitted that officer Donahue was critically wounded by another officer. The undetonated improvised explosive devices were "found" long after arresting Dzhokhar. Insufficient evidence has surfaced to argue that the brothers were even involved with the police's storied SUV chase.

Carjacking victim "Danny" is an actor paid to help patch up the failing narrative. Beyond whatever he may get paid to say, all the evidence of his kidnapping and the theft of his Mercedes ML 350 is merely hearsay. Claiming he's a Chinese Internet entrepreneur helped to cover for the exceptional value of the Mercedes involved and his tremendously important but disablingly poor English.

The provided details about the condition of Dzhokhar after extracted from the boat are dramatically different than the hospital's. At the end of the purported chase, it's said he ran over Tamerlan while escaping but the ER doctor said Tamerlan wasn't run over and had additional bullets in him. It's admitted that the FBI murdered Ibragim Todashev and the murder of Sunil Tripathi needs to be investigated.

The so-called bombs at the Marathon weren't pressure cookers full of BBs, nails and explosives. They were just pyrotechnics. All of the violence was fake. The purported victims were compensated crisis actors and many are still being paraded to further the freedom-defeating agenda of the Patriots' Day drill.

The martial law takeover of Watertown and part of Boston had mixed reactions. Bostonians rolled over to the belligerent, unlawful force exercised, yet there have been many relatively minor but painful backlashes which have exposed the illegality and true purpose of the JTTF's drill.

From fake news reports to the First Lady visiting the Saudi Abdul Alharbi in the hospital, every level of government seemed to have an interest in or something to conceal regarding the story later regurgitated by mainstream media and pro-establishment politicians. The official narrative's wounds are festering but the increasingly feeble fable will continue to grow. There's no turning back now for the parties who crafted and executed the drill, so they've tried to make the steady stream of strategic disinformation too overwhelmingly complex for the average citizen to track and accurately sift through. Whether or not the truth will grow faster than the lie will be up to us.

The Trial of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev

The trial of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev began January 5, 2015. It reportedly was repeatedly stalled by his defense in response to the glut of bogus material provided by prosecutors. 30 counts of Federal charges were stacked upon him. Since he was charged federally instead of by the State of Massachusetts, the door opened for the death penalty. Lead attorney Judy Clarke staged him for failure several months beforehand by presenting arguments against his mental fortitude.

On March 4th, she needlessly volunteered: “it was him.” This played along with prosecutors to shift the substance of the trial from a contest of the facts to the typically secondary debate about whether or not he should be put to death. The next day, CNN released 35 purported photographic evidences of Dzhokhar’s guilt: mostly random pictures of the scene, along with pictures of a few inconsequential stage props, a planted, bloodied gun and a cheap device that’s reportedly an improvised explosive but unrelated to the kind of explosives allegedly detonated at the Marathon. Surveillance footages were released on March 15th that reportedly showed him reacting calmly to the first explosion before leaving the area but, if any emotions surfaced on him, it appears they were surprise and agitation. Subsequent footage of him buying milk at Whole Foods was framed as evidence that he appeared without remorse but, if it does reveal something, it’s his lack of concern about the world possibly coming down on him soon. The Tsarnaev trial exhibits are available for public viewing. There are dozens of individual links to pictures, videos, electronic data, etc. but none of them can be considered legitimate evidence that the brothers were behind what happened or that anyone was legitimately hurt. It wasn’t until after the public release of the exhibits and the defense’s needless portrayal of him as guilty that a motion for acquittal of all thirty charges was filed because prosecution “failed to introduce evidence sufficient to establish each essential element of the offenses charged beyond a reasonable doubt.” It received no meaningful attention.

It is said Dzhokhar was allowed to see autopsy photos of his purportedly dead victims but they are, to this day, forbidden from public viewing. Despite purportedly having been the only one given this privilege, he reportedly was never allowed to as much as talk to other inmates and his discussions with his family were perpetually monitored by an FBI agent.

Not even snippets of what transpired in court were documented for the public. All that was given to indicate a trial ever took place were cartoons, underlining the cartoonish nature of the growing fiction. If the crimes weren’t publicized as post-9/11 “terrorism,” more of the public likely would have found it suspicious and perhaps outrageous that something as simple as afterimages of the trial weren’t provided, because presenting nothing but a comic reel of the trial of the United States’ #1 living alleged terrorist is openly disrespectful to Americans.

To add to any remaining illusion of legitimacy, several crisis actors were reused to help paint over the legal process of trying and sentencing him. Some specialized in mourning on command, although the acting was generally quite poor. Some simply regurgitated lies. A few pawns read scripts from positions of authority and spoke matter-of-factly about things they admittedly had nothing to do with and otherwise knew nothing about.

One of few equally informative reporters assigned to cover the sentencing, Emily Rooney from WGBH-TV claimed [1:42] to have been listening to it but only discussed how exceptionally complex the jury’s finding was, while shakily stumbling over basic descriptions that apply to every trial and had nothing to do with his specifically.

US Attorney for the District of Massachusetts Carmen Ortiz read a sorrowful script [0:38] about how the nature of the senseless carnage was political. During the reading, fresh and familiar frauds masquerading as victims stood next to known, experienced political actor Carlos Arredondo [1:04].

Dzhokhar was convicted on April 8th, sentenced to death by lethal injection on May 15th and formally sentenced to death with multiple consecutive life sentences on June 24th. In lieu of MSNBC and others’ baseless shifting of the narrative from the brothers having been violent Islamic extremists to them having been libertarians, conspiracy theorists and white supremacists, US Attorney Carmen Ortiz proclaimed: “there was nothing about this crime that was Islam associated.” Nothing substantive has arisen to reveal Dzhokhar’s whereabouts or well-being since his kidnapping beyond a video [7:44] released by prosecutors of him flipping off the camera in a jail cell. No evidence to suggest he wasn’t repeatedly shot by the FBI has arisen to negate the details provided by Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center. During his formal sentencing, he reportedly spoke for the first time since saying “not guilty,” wherein he purportedly apologized and confessed but no evidence has emerged to back these claims.

Years of appeals may be ahead before the needle, which buys time for both his defense and the public to work to correct the ruling. A motion for a new trial has already been filed. Rebuttal of the court’s decision in a case like this would be unprecedented but no less unprecedented than finding it acceptable to have a man as young as Dzhokhar on Federal death row.

On June 2nd, Dias Kadyrbayev, the close friend who hid Dzhokhar’s fireworks, laptop, etc. from authorities, received six years in prison followed by a scheduled forced deportation. Robel Phillipos was sentenced on June 5th to three years in prison and three years of supervised release for making false statements to law enforcement in a terrorism investigation. Azamat Tazhayakov received 42 months in prison and three years of supervised release for conspiring to obstruct justice and obstructing justice with the intent to impede a terrorism investigation. Khairullozhon Matanov was sentenced on June 18th to 30 months in prison for obstructing the investigation.

Conclusions in Lieu of the Evidence

Since the Tsarnaev brothers were embarrassingly arrogantly declared the only possible suspects, there has been no reasonable provided evidence of their alleged crimes. The entirety of the case against Dzhokhar was ill-conceived hearsay, lies and fraud.

The cause for most of this unprecedented, childish sloppiness may have been the last-minute cancellation of what appeared to have been the launch of the JTTF’s Plan A: the unveiling of the first arrest. The undeclared, initial suspect is still unknown but, beyond the CST team, the suspect who was actually holding a backpack identical to the one that’s said to have contained the first bomb, as indisputably revealed in the 4chan.org photos, is the disheveled white man in a big, blue coat. Many citizens, however, were ready for a disheveled white man to be blamed for the attack on Patriots’ Day and beat the JTTF to the punch by swiftly uploading the surveillance photos and footages and revealing the announced drill, including the CST team. The JTTF appeared to have been cornered and forced to execute a seemingly loosely preconceived Plan B. Going forward with its apparent Plan A after citizens already had their way with much of the evidence would have been far more abrasive and suspicious than the more accepted, radical Muslim alternative.

A little more than a day later, the FBI made it clear that anyone speculating who the true suspects are by looking at the surveillance photos and footages, which were by then all over the Internet, was basically in league with the terrorists. It also cancelled its 5:00 PM press conference to block questions about the deployment of its apparent Plan B: using its existing connections and motives to frame the Tsarnaev brothers. In a fleeting attempt to retain some credibility, the Patriots’ Day drill against patriots was flipped to Muslims. The anti-“right-wing” propaganda, however, was fraudulently reattached to the narrative after the citizens who basically never cared began to forget the flipping of the script.

For years, the FBI and Homeland Security have joined other government agencies in sponsoring and executing the termination of our freedoms in the name of safety from terrorists. Meanwhile, they’ve been caught red-handed, thus far inconsequentially, provocateuring the Boston Marathon bombings by employing various resources to perform the “training exercise,” which then disgustingly blossomed into the freedom-targeting official narrative. The Department of Homeland Security wasn’t truly established to stop radical Muslim terrorists. It was designed to stall, damage and thwart the efforts of the growing, freedom-loving resistance against the white-collar, criminal financial and political takeover of the United States. That's why the War on Terror is publicly transitioning from Muslim terrorists to so-called domestic "right-wing extremists."

The mass casualty drill near the finish line was the beginning of a multi-faceted psychological operation on the American public. It was a government exercise, a test pilot, to see how citizens will respond to such blatant desecrations of our civil liberties in the name of fighting "terrorism." Americans were violently taught that it's acceptable for government, which is still pretending to be our necessary savior even in lieu of the mounting evidence to the contrary, to lock down a city to chase a teenager. Muslim terror and so-called "right-wing extremism" were conflated for the public for the future. The fact that the brothers were Chechen fed into the propaganda pertaining to current international tensions with Russia and made white people appear to be potential Muslim terrorists. The young ages of the characters strewn throughout the storyline, combined with how Dzhokhar had no semblance of justice in court, sends the message that even freshmen in college should be profiled as potential terrorists. News of the event also camouflaged an April 16th New York Times article that detailed how a "600-page" Congressional Committee report found the Bush and Obama Administrations guilty of treasonous torture post-9/11.

On April 15th, 2013, the orchestrators of the false flag terror at the Boston Marathon cast forward an unstoppable train of events on a track solely composed of evolving lies and hearsay that would be inadmissible in a fair courtroom. Piling more crisis actors and fraudulent media reports onto this festering mess won't resolve the broken foundation of repulsive lies upon which the planned psychological operation began.

Given the evidence aforesaid, convicting the young man was nothing short of madness. Historically, however, tyranny of this fashion doesn't just stop when it becomes immoral and illegal. The conviction of Dzhokhar set a precedent in the minds of the gullible and the cowardly for accepting any violation of civil liberties that our bankrupt, foreign banker-occupied ghost of a Federal government wishes to criminally impose upon us. It sends the message that, no matter how inhumane and fraudulent the system is, citizens are slaves to the Federal government and that the only way to be a good person is to shut up, slave for the system, to not question authority and do only what you're told. If we will roll over and just accept having no rights in the name of fighting terrorism; and accept having our towns run over by Federal goons to chase a teenager; and if we don't acknowledge the malevolence of the propaganda that the framed Tsarnaev brothers' alleged actions were tied to liking the Second Amendment and thinking like libertarians, who simply want to take America back from the private families who've criminally overtaken her and restore the value that she once had; and if we choose to neglect what is known about the Boston Marathon bombings just because we don't want to stop pretending that our government is benign and that we're on the winning team; if we're willing to cower in fear and submit to the power and devilishness of organized crime, we will volunteer to it what remains of the freedom bestowed onto us and our children by the bravery, selflessness and honor of our forefathers. Those who've taken the time to understand what really happened during and after the Federal government's drill against patriots will know how propaganda was used to bolster the false flag attacks, will easily see through the continuing, cobbled fiction that is mainstream media's official story and will remember when future grandiose frauds are deployed upon us.